THE BROOK.

[AFTER TENNYSON.]

A gentle brook meanders here,
And, in its wild, sweet chirpings, hark!
A pleasing strain regales my ear:
"I run through ridges, cold and dark;
I wind around the peaceful leas,
Refresh the roots of oak and pine;
I dally with the mountain breeze;
I sparkle in the summer shine."

"I glide by valleys; feed the mills;
I fret amid the desert wild;
Exhaust a dozen purling rills;
I'm Nature's trusting, happy child.
I live in beauty, love and light;
I'm cheerful, blithesome, glad and gay;
With shadows of the darkest night
I wind along; I dance and play."

"Amid the sharpest storms I sing;
I'm cheery when the thunders roar;
I rock the bird with weary wing;
And to the answering hills I pour
Exultant lays. I have the reeds
That grace my sunny slopes, and give
Fresh life and beauty to the meads
And plants that on my bounty live."

"I hide beneath the hazy spruce;
I glance beside the shelving rock;
I give the maple half its juice,
And satisfy the thirsty flock;
I creep along the silent woods;
All day I travel and rejoice,
Delight the fields and solitudes
That listen to my chattering voice."

"The rushes kiss me as I pass;
The swallow taps me with his wing;
Fair maidens praise the faithful glass,
And roll on at my side and sing;
Faint travelers stop to slake their thirst;
Gay insects sport upon my breast;
And I, by rippling waves immersed,
The eager, sharp-eyed trout arrest."

"The willows reach their fingers down
Among my ruffled fans to play;
The lily lifts its rested crown
And shakes the pearly drops away;
The dainty, modest violet,
Smiling upon the verdant banks,
With my chaste, twittering waves I fret;
I gently stir the osier ranks."

"I feed the minnows in my fold,
Their silver bellies flashing out;
Beside the sand of sparkling gold
They leap up and they dash about;
And, when is heard a tramping foot,
To broader depths they swiftly fly,
Or hide beneath a straggling root,
Until the stranger passes by."

"On, on I flow; I dance; I toil;
Amid the broom and rushes pass;
Bring wealth to cheer the arid soil;
I nourish roots of meadow grass;
I slip through field and green recess,
O'er sparkling sands by fen and glade;
I leap beside the water-cress;
I babble in the sun and shade."

"As in the past, I slide, I go,
Forever laughing as I sing;
In sunlight and in starlight flow,
A blessing and a joy I bring.
The same bright, mantling path I keep
As in the dreamy ages gone.
I wind, I twist, I dash, I leap,
My course is on, forever on."

—N. Y. Independent.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Mrs. Langtry has begun to understand something of American advertising. She took a special train from Edinburgh to London, at a cost of $500.

—Miss Annie Louise Cary is now enjoying excellent health, but has not recovered the use of her voice. Her physician tells her she must not attempt to sing again for a year.

—Charles Langheimer, well known as "Dickens' Dutchman," who has spent some thirty years of his life in jail, and who was recently released, has been adopted by a well-known gentleman of Philadelphia, who hopes for his reform.

—The resignation of Rev. Samuel Longfellow, a brother of the poet, as pastor of the Unitarian Church of Germantown, Pa., has been accepted. At the request of his brother's family he will devote a year to writing a biography of the poet.

—The recent honors paid to the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" recall what George Sand wrote to her about that book just thirty years ago: "Honor and respect to you, Mrs. Stowe. One of these days your reward, which is already noted in the archives of Heaven, will also be recognized in this world."

Eruption of a Geyser.

A geyser eruption is not at all like the play of a fountain, in which water is pushed by pressure to a uniform height, but is like a cataract of crystal-clear hot water, leaping upward as though instinct with life, then shivering into rockets of spray, each, as it ceases to rise, emitting a little puff of steam, which shows the force that lifted it and which now leaves it, no longer able to cope against the laws of gravity, to fall to the steaming mound below in showers of opals and diamonds; while the central portion of the column drops down in an immense volume that strikes the earth with a noise like the roar of distant surf. Every instant the column is changing its height and shape as the mighty forces of the inner world pulsate along with it; and it is always enveloped and surrounded by lofty pillars of steam, swaying with the wind, constantly assuming fantastic forms and fringed with brilliant rainbows. There magnificent displays generally occur at fixed periods, as in the case of "Old Faithful," which spouts from an orifice seven feet long by two feet wide every sixty-seven minutes. It is the only large geyser known in the world which spouts so frequently and with such unfailing regularity, whence its name. Most of the geysers, however, spout at irregular intervals, varying from three to four hours to several days, their eruptions lasting from twenty minutes to nine hours.

Between eruptions the geysers generally pour out from their beautifully ornamented craters great puffs of steam, like high pressure engines, little jets of scalding spray being constantly thrown to the top of the crater, while all the time there is a sound of fierce boiling below, and in others the hot water stands—a wonderfully transparent pool—in basins ten to seventy-five feet across, within each of which is the well or tube from which the eruption occurs. No language can adequately describe the gracefully curved and scalloped forms in which the silicious rock is deposited on the bottoms and margins of these basins, nor the beauty of the delicate colors with which they are dyed. Standing or lying all about the geyser craters are trees killed by the hot waters or their deposits. Nothing can be more spectral than these naked trunks of trees, stripped of bark, bare of branches, and bleached as white as snow. Several of the largest geysers—especially "Old Faithful" and the "Castle"—are of very recent origin, since high up on the mounds of each are found large trunks of pine trees, not yet wholly petrified, which had they been there many years must have been completely buried by the rapid deposit of the silica.—San Francisco Chronicle.

—Judge James Garland, who retires next New-Year's-Day as a Judge of the Supreme Court of Virginia, celebrated his ninety-first birthday recently, at Lynchburg. He is now blind, and his daughter's eyes are used instead of his own, but he has as full possession of his mental faculties as when he was a distinguished member of Congress, during Gen. Jackson's Administration.—Chicago Tribune.

—Dr. Christopher Graham, of Kentucky, although ninety-eight, suffers from no ailment save deafness and is still an active and eager searcher for mineral specimens, which it is understood that he will bequeath to the Louisville Library Museum. He is one of the original ten members of the famous Boone Camp Hunting Association, formed forty years since, which was maintained for twenty years with great success.

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOV. 1, 1882.

TERMS:—The EVENING BULLETIN is published daily, and served free of postage at 6 cents per week; 25 cents per month; 75 cents per three months; $1.50 per six months, and $3 per year, payable in advance.

THE EVENING BULLETIN HAS A LARGER CIRCULATION IN THIS CITY, CHESTER AND ABERDEEN, OHIO, THAN ANY OTHER PAPER PUBLISHED IN MAYSVILLE.

ADELINA PATTI and Nicolini have arrived New York.

DR. CHARLES BEATTY, the oldest Presbyterian minister in Ohio, died at Steubenville, on Tuesday.

MR. ED. HENDRICK, son of T. T. Hendrick, of Flemingsburg, died at noon Monday, after a brief illness. He was a lawyer and a very promising young man.

COL. HURT is in favor of the collection of tariff duties sufficient to pay the expenses of an economical administration of the government, and of removing all the unnecessary taxes that are now such a burden upon the people. This is what the people of the country want and a vote for Col. Hurt is a step in the direction of securing such legislation.

COL. BUFORD, who killed Judge Elliott, has escaped from the Anchorage asylum and is now at large in Indiana. It has been decided that he cannot be reclaimed by a requisition on the governor of that state as such a remedy by constitutional provision refers only to "treason, felony or other crimes," and lunacy, as in this case, cannot be construed into a crime. So Buford goes free and the matter is at an end.

The Tobacco License Law.

Under the existing law on this subject, enacted by a Republican congress and kept in force for so many years, there have occurred some of the most outrageous hardships ever known in this country under any law enacted by congress. Men living long distances from the Federal Courts have been dragged from their homes from one hundred to three hundred miles to answer prosecutions for selling two or three pounds of tobacco to a neighbor to be used as a cure for hog cholera or something else of that kind. The Democrats tried to repeal this odious law at the last session of congress, but the Republicans voted solidly against the repeal and kept the unjust law in operation. If Captain Culbertson would vote differently from his party he must be a new kind of a Republican. Here is a single instance of the hardships farmers suffer under the unjust law that occurred recently in St. Louis. It is copied from the Post-Dispatch of a late date. And this is not an extreme case. Hundreds like it have occurred in the last two or three years in all the tobacco growing states. And the Republican party is responsible for them all:

"Well, here I am, an old man in a strange city, and without a cent of money in my pocket, and two hundred miles away from home," said Isaac Murray, as he stood in Jailer Ryan's office at the four courts this afternoon almost in despair, after serving thirty days in jail, a sentence pronounced by Judge Treat, for selling some leaf tobacco without license. "I live in Macon county in this state, and am a farmer by occupation. Nearly three months ago I was arrested by the United States marshal for selling a few strips of tobacco without a license. I have only one arm and I'm almost disabled. I'm now going on my 66th year. At my trial I admitted selling the tobacco for a few dollars, and was sent to the city jail for thirty days. The time expired this morning, and I was discharged, but Lord knows I wish I could stay there, for I'd get something to eat and a place to sleep at least. I don't know a soul in this city, and what am I going to do? I've been over to the mayor's office but he won't do anything for me. I was at the United States court, but the deputy marshal said he wouldn't let me see the judge, and God knows I don't know what to do when night comes on if I don't get assistance from some quarter. If I could get back to Macon county I would be all right, but it looks now as if I'd have to starve right here in the city's streets." He was advised to go to the United States marshal himself, and turning his coat-collar up about his wear-beaten face he started out in the sleet.

COUNTY POINTS.

MILLWOOD.

Abner Hord and family visited Cincinnati last week.

Mr. Calvert, a son, Mrs. Mamie Worthington was visiting her parents here last week.

Elder West, of Lexington, filled the pulpit at Millcreek Sunday. He is a fluent speaker and preaches sound doctrine.

It is hoped that Elder Harkins, after a long illness, will be able to fill his appointment here next Sunday.

Willie Rice was home on a short stay from Lexington Saturday and Sunday. He reports very favorably of the school.

Mrs. Dee Brooks, of Maysville, made her old home in this neighborhood happy by her appearance this week, a short visit indeed. Dee has many friends around her old home farm.

Prof. Frost has a fine music class in our neighborhood. Sweet girls.

Dr. Dougherty is improving his residence very much. Henry Rasp, of Maysville, and Clarence White are the mechanics.

Well done, thou faithful J. E. C., enter into the joys of matrimonial bliss, says his new wife. DARLING.

HELENA.

We have just returned from a short visit to Bourbon and Fayette counties—the heart of the "Blue grass" region—and thinking it might interest some of our many readers, we will give a brief account of our observations. Boarding the 1:30 train Saturday evening, we passed swiftly through a rough and hilly country, and soon arriving at Carlisle, where we stopped over until Monday morning, with Mr. Will J. Piper and lady (nee Miss Nannie Shanklin) to whom we are under many obligations for their generous hospitality and kind endeavors to make us enjoy ourself during our stay.

On Saturday night and Sunday morning we listened to able discourses by Rev. Henry Souder, at the Presbyterian Church.

Carlisle is a picturesque town of some 1,200 or 1,500 inhabitants, situated in a good farming country, and is a place of considerable business. A telephone line is in course of construction, connecting Carlisle with Moorefield and Sharpsburg, which will open up easy communication between those places.

Taking the early train Monday, for Lexington, we passed through a country that for beauty and agricultural superiority cannot be excelled the world over. All along road, vast fields and woodland pastures of fine Blue grass, dotted here and there with splendid residences spread out before vision in scenes of rare beauty that once seen are not soon forgotten, and that give to this country the well deserved and appropriate name of Blue grass region.

Lexington is a city of 22,000, inhabitants, is quite a railroad center and is destined to become a large city in course of time. Since the completion of the Big Sandy Railroad, Lexington, is enjoying cheap fuel. Coal for which they formerly paid 25 cents per bushel they now get for 15 cents per bushel. Lexington has an ice factory which manufactures twenty tons of ice every twenty-four hours which is retailed over the city at 1 1/4 cents per pound. Lexington has many noted schools and a beautiful cemetery, where repose the remains of the immortal statesman Henry Clay. A monument one hundred feet high marks his resting place. General John Morgan the noted raider during the late war, together with a large number of Federal and Confederate soldiers repose here, side by side. Lexington has fine fair grounds and race track and six miles of street railroad completed which is to be extended through all the principal streets of city. Taking the Cincinnati fast line, from Lexington, we stopped at Paris to see Craddock, of the Kentuckian. We found him reclining on a couch in his sanctum and in quite a crippled condition from injuries received some time ago. Paris is a thriving town noted principally for its fine court house and the oldest editor in the State. The downtown citizens of Paris are doing some tall grubbing because of the removal of the depot which compels them to go half a mile to take the train. Taking the morning train Saturday, we soon arrived home safe and sound. GREEN HORN.

From Another Correspondent.

Uncle Sam Mitchell has just returned home from a fishing expedition in the mountains of Lewis county he brought home some of the finest specimens of fish and venison we have seen this year.

R. Wells presented the agent here of the K. C. R. R., a fine coke stove for the use of his office and comfort of his many friends, said to have cost one hundred dollars, eight feet and two inches high and long in proportion.

Born, to the wife of Mr. W. Y. Wells, a fine son.

J. A. Patton, is selling his stock of groceries, dry goods, notions &c, for the purpose of emigrating to Indianapolis, where he expects to open up a full line of notions exclusively, we regret to have him leave, still there is one near by to fill his place.

A very large amount of walnut timber is being shipped from this place via Cincinnati, to points unknown.

I noticed in your last week's issue a note from your correspondent, Romeo, at Mayslick he seems to be particularly interested in one of the mercantile firms of Mayslick, and the manner in which the K. C. R. R., delivers her freight, says, we had better get a lot of pack mules to carry our freight from Cincinnati. I will suggest that one will be all sufficient for that firm but for the other firms of his town would advise them to procure a dozen or more apiece for their business. Come over friend Romeo, I have a mule that will suit you and I will sell him low for cash. WIDE AWAKE.

A fire broke out Saturday evening on the lumber docks of Hamilton, McClure & Co., six miles below East Saginaw, Mich., and before it was put under control 4,500,000 feet of valuable lumber was destroyed, together with the docks and trams. The loss will reach $75,000, fully covered with insurance.

Accidental Wounding of John M. Hierley, of the Emmet Rifles.

CATLETTSBURG, Ky., Oct. 31, 1882.—The state guards arrived here safely at five o'clock p.m. yesterday. Everything seems to be quiet with no indications anywhere of impending trouble. Neal and Craft were taken into court to-day and through their attorneys, asked for a change of venue, on the ground that they could not have a fair trial in Boyd county.

Sergeant John M. Hierley, of the Emmet Rifles, yesterday evening accidentally shot himself in the calf of the leg, inflicting a slight wound. All the other members of the Emmet Rifles are well.

LATER.

CATLETTSBURG, Ky., Nov. 1, 1882.—The application of Neal and Craft for a change of venue has been granted. Their cases will be sent to Grayson, Carter county, for trial. The excitement here last night was most intense.

All night it was expected the mob would make a demonstration against the prisoners and the troops in consequence slept on their arms and were aroused three times during the night expecting the attack.

Thirty scouts were kept out all night. It was rumored that a mob from Ashland and Ironton was coming up to take the prisoners from the troops. They would have met with a warm reception had they tried it. All is quiet at present.

The Emmet Rifles are all well and have been notified to prepare to move at a moment's notice. We expect to come home by way of the river. M. J. M.

Delicate and Intricate Operation.

A very delicate and intricate operation in scientific surgery was performed at the Cincinnati Hospital, on Monday, on Sarah Harding, a colored woman, of Maysville, who went there about three months ago for the purpose of having the operation—the removal of a large tumor—made by the physicians of the Hospital. It had been growing for eight years and had reached enormous proportions, being almost as weighty as the body it encumbered. She carried it in a bag which was larger than a coffee sack, and was suspended from the opposite shoulder by a strap. The tumor was of a fatty character, formed directly under the walls of the abdomen, and projecting outward, and for the most part at the side. The operation was performed without loss of blood and was pronounced every way successful. Its actual weight after the operation was seventy-one pounds. Mrs. Harding's weight was one hundred pounds. It is considered by the profession as an unusually successful performance, as the tumor was one of the largest known. This important surgical process was executed by Dr. W. P. Dandridge with Dr. E. P. Walker, the local surgeon of the Hospital as assistant. The condition of the patient after the operation was as favorable as could be expected, although it was impossible to say whether she would recover, but the indications were that she will.

FARMERS who are interested in having the tobacco tax repealed, so that they may buy and sell this great staple without restriction, will consult their own interests by supporting Capt. Culbertson, who is pledged to a support of that desirable measure.—New Republican.

He is, is he? Well, isn't it just a little strange that Capt. Culbertson should pledge himself to do any such unorthodox Republican thing? Let us see what the Republican record is on the subject. At the last session of Congress Mr. Dibrell, a Democrat from Tennessee, introduced a bill in the House to repeal the law which imposes a fine or penalty on any farmer or producer of tobacco who may sell the same to a consumer, and making it lawful in future for all farmers or others producing tobacco to sell their own or tenant's production without any license or penalty whatever. Now leaf tobacco is the only product of agriculture which the producer is not allowed to sell freely in open market, and the oppressive and exceptional nature of the law and the arbitrary means taken to enforce it has long rendered it odious. It is the only product of agriculture which is taxed by the government, and to deal in which freely by the producer is a crime. His freedom to trade in his own hard-earned product was prohibited that the government might have its tax. The Democrats in Congress proposed to repeal this law and take the unjust restriction of sale off of the farmer and producer. The question was taken on Mr. Dibrell's bill and there were 131 yeas and 91 nays. The measure lacked the requisite two thirds vote in its favor and it did not pass. Now let us see how the vote stood. The Democrats without a single exception voted for measure, and every Republican, with the exception of ten, voted against it. This is the record of the Republican party on the subject of reducing the tax on tobacco. The Democrats asked the repeal of the tax and the Republicans opposed it, and at the same session of Congress required the repeal of the tax on bank capital—with the result to lift the burden from the banks and their customers and leave heavy burdens on the planter and consumer of his tobacco.

The talk about Mr. Culbertson differing thus widely in sentiment from his party is all nonsense. He will do precisely what the Republican caucus dictates, and that will be in the future as it has been in the past, directly against the interests of the agriculturists and others classes of working men.

A DESPATCH to the Courier-Journal from Catlettsburg says the people there have no idea of fighting the state troops but they are determined to hang Neal and Craft if they can get hold of them.

Borrowing Tools.

The needs of modern farming demand a great variety of tools; indeed the greatest difference between the farming of to-day and of twenty years ago is to be found in the great improvement in all kinds of tools, and the great saving of labor that their use accomplishes. Many of these tools are expensive and require considerable skill in their use and care to keep them in good repair, so that the small farmer who has only occasional use for them, and can ill afford to own them, is placed in the dilemma of not being able to do without them nor to buy them either; in his strait he is fain to borrow.

Now, if he will but be careful to observe two or three rules in borrowing, he will have little trouble in any good Christian neighborhood, in getting any tools he needs at any time the owners are not using them; but by neglect of them he will become an annoyance to the neighborhood, and unable to supply his needs without buying.

First of all no tool should ever be borrowed without the knowledge and consent of the owner, nor without an understanding as to when it is to be returned. Second, any borrowed tool should be returned immediately when it is no longer wanted, or when the owner requests, and in case of any damage the owner should be informed and satisfaction given. Simple as these rules are, and strange as it may seem that any one should neglect them, there is probably no one source of trouble between neighbors so fruitful as carelessness or wilful neglect of duty and common decency in these matters. It is extremely annoying, when in need of a tool to be unable to find it, and especially so when one does not know which of two or three careless neighbors to blame for the annoyance.

I know a man who makes great professions of religious faith, and whose sincerity I do not pretend to judge, who has had in constant use, for a year at a time, tools which belonged to a neighbor, and which said neighbor had to replace, not knowing where they were lost; but when he found out at last who was at fault, it made a great deal of hard feeling, which was a good deal worse than the loss of the tools.

It is a good plan to brand all tools with the owner's name, which will serve to remind honest persons where they belong and will often prevent their being neglected. It is also a good plan to keep a slate and pencil in the tool house on which a memorandum should be made when a tool is borrowed, and erased when it is returned—this will serve to remind the owner where to look for missing tools. With such precautions, and among decent neighbors, the farmer who owns good tools need not fear to follow the teaching "from him that would borrow of thee, turn thou not away." There are, however, neighbors and neighbors, and any one who wishes to keep his tools where he can find them when needed, will have to discriminate between the careless, unprincipled borrower, who never returns a borrowed tool till it is sent for, and the careful, conscientious man who always returns whatever he borrows, promptly and in good order.

It is often difficult, where several men are employed on the farm, to prevent their borrowing and lending tools without the knowledge of their employers; this is one of the most fruitful sources of trouble, and needs careful attention. No hired man should borrow or lend any tool without knowledge of his employer—and of the owner of the tool in question.—W. D. Philbrick, in New-England Farmer.

—The Gothic style of handwriting, now so popular among young ladies, may have its disadvantages. It is said that a young man who recently received a specimen of it could not tell, for the life of him, whether it was "Yes, with pleasure," "No, thank you," or a sketch of a picket fence.

—A visitor, on calling at a friend's house during the session of the Legislature, was questioned thus by a little boy. "Where is your ax?" "What do you mean, little boy?" asked the visitor. "I heard pa say the reason you came to town was, you had an ax to grind."
